CUBAN REVOLUTION.

Latest Uprising Said to Have Been Invented by Spaniards

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—General Jose ro, representative of the Independent party of Cuba in the United States re- eived a dispatch to-day to the effect that the Cuban rebellion is at an end, the insurgents have surren- der. Mr. Mora, when asked what the cause of the rebellion was, said it began as a Revolutionary society, but was taken up of Cubans in the field, Spain and elsewhere, while not sharing their responsibility in pre- ring the ground for a rebellion for re- ognized grievances and of lending help to a spontaneous revolutionary move- ment. It became a party to the pres- ent uprising. It seems, in fact, that its enemies and sympathizers have been shame- lessly abused by the enthusiasm of hon- est patriots who seriously made use of in- nocent means for the purpose of the Span- ish authorities, who are alone respon- sible for the trouble.

Other cablegrams just arrived show that a handful of honest Cubans participated to rebel against the oppressive rule of the Republican party in the opening instigation of the uprising, but in the province to be the scene of the active hostilities.

The spirit of the rebellion is local- ized and it will doubtless teach the Spanish the necessity of keeping the island under strict military rule. My informant informed me that of those who took up arms at the town of Las Tunas three have surrendered ten have been captured and two killed in skirmishes.

It is stated that the Republican party has been taken by surprise at the outbreak, but that he has not been stated, but that he has not any statement until his arrival was fully confirmed.

The Cuban Situation

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The Spanish steamer Habana from Havana, arrived here at 6:30 this morning. The passengers were very reticent as to the condition of affairs at Havana when they left that port. A passenger, who was seen on board, said that while no panic existed, the streets were patrolled by soldiers armed with Winchester rifles and the police carried revolvers and heavy swords in their belts.

The Cubans have been warned against making any information to foreigners.

There were three Spanish men of war in the harbor when the Habana left on Thursday.

THE MOORISH WAR

Sagier Editor's Opinion of the Present Situation

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Bufgett Meaken, editor of the Tangier (Morocco) Times, writes as follows: In an interview to day regarding the trouble between the Spanish and Moors, he said.

It is no wonder that little or nothing is known abroad of the real truth of the war between the Spaniards and the tribes of the Moroccan coast, since the only communication between the Spanish settlement at Melilla and Europe is by their own privilege, which they have used to some purpose in print. Their story of the affair.

The Sultan of Morocco, who is in no way responsible for the disturbance, is now on the side of the Atlas mountains, where it will be another fortnight before he hears by couriers on foot that it was telegraphed to this country a week ago. Spain is unquestionably anxious in this matter and has carefully chosen her opportunity of raising the cry. I have visited Melilla and have my own people concerned to say that the long and short of the matter is that Spain is bankrupt and that her people are disaffected and something must be done to raise the wind. As a matter of fact France will forbid her appropriating Moorish soil she will have to compert with the return of a few mil- lions of her own depreciated dollars now resting in Morocco."

Fire Bugs in Tennessee

JACKSON, Tenn., Nov. 16.—Grace Episcopal Church owned by one of the most wealthy congregations in the city, was burned this morning. The conflagration is evidently the work of fire bugs as there has been no fire about the building since Sunday. S. J. Gilbert, the organist, formerly of Buffalo, N. Y., was arrested charged with applying the torch. He has been to the employ of the church for something over a year. He was discharged Monday for drunkenness. The police have succeeded in fastening a strong net of evidence around Gilbert, who strenuously denies his guilt. Memphis has suffered a regular siege of fire bugs for the past ten days. The Lyceum Theater, the Schmultzer Hardware company, the Y. M. C. A. rooms, Grace Church and the Lyceum of Midland freight depot and several residences have all gone up in smoke. There were three fires in the city to-day. The total loss during the ten days foots up to more than $[illegible]. The school building in South Memphis was burned last night. The incendiary has been brought under control when flames were discovered in a block's distance from the school building. The police are convinced that many of the fires were of an origin which calls for a rigid investigation.

AN EXTRA SESSION.

Governor Waite Deliberates His Decision Not to Call One

DENVER, Nov. 16.—Governor Waite this afternoon gave out his decision not to call an extra session of the legislature. The Governor's reasons are briefly stated as follows:

The Governor has received a letter from Oliver Newell, Secretary of the Cripple Creek Commercial Club, which leads him to believe that the leaders are right in their expectations.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR

The Annual Report of the Executive Board Made

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 16.—It was decided until to-day that the annual report of the general executive board of the Knights of Labor, which was given to the publication office at first, had been positively held back. It has been now learned that the report was withheld because it contained a statement that the organization was burdened with members of the order who had financial interests in the Cripple Creek district, and that the board, in its report, condemned the strike and lockout, and contained no expression of sympathy.

The board hopes that the high per capita tax is almost the only cause of revenue, the other being expenses incurred for the organization. Some of the expenses will be made to the full extent of the law. The report shows a large sum of money has been expended in the secret service, which has been supplied by the Knights of Labor. The report also shows that the order has lost in membership during the year, and that the number of members in good standing is now 100,000.

ABOUT HAWAII

Senator Morgan in Conference With Secretary Gresham

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—A Washington special to the Press says that Senator Morgan of the Foreign Relations committee in the Senate was closeted all yesterday afternoon with Secretary Gresham, and that the Secretary said there was no intention of any interference in arms at Hawaii, and that Minister Willis would send no circulars and call upon United States citizens only to assist the Queen. The attitude of the United States would be purely diplomatic and it would content itself with a disavowal of former steps taken by the United States Minister Stevens and the United States naval forces assisting in the establishment of the present provisional government. He permitted Senator Morgan to infer that if the Queen was not strong enough to establish her rights to her throne under these suspicious circumstances Minister Willis would not order the troops or the sailors from the men of war to assist her.

A Crank Arrested

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—A special from Patterson, N. J., to the Herald says: A crank who gave his name to the police as Joseph Mitch is now locked up at police headquarters for threatening to blow up St. Bonventure's convent in this city.

Mitch called at the convent and demanded from the mother superior $5000. He threatened to blow up the building with dynamite unless his demand was complied with. He finally went away and returned this morning and renewed the threats to destroy the convent with dynamite if he did not get the money. The mother superior telephoned to the police and the crank was arrested.

Jumped the Track

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 17.—At Lafayette, Ala., at an early hour this morning, while the passenger train from Opelika, on the East Alabama road was entering town running fifteen miles an hour, the entire train except the engine jumped the track on a curve and rolled down a 10 foot embankment. The train was filled with passengers and immediately after the accident the wreck took fire from the overturning of the stove. A panic followed among the terror stricken passengers.

Thomas Driver of Lafayette, who was riding in the baggage car was caught under a seat and before he could be rescued was burned to death. A dozen others were gotten out.

A Frost at Brunswick

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Nov. 16.—Frost and ice formed in Brunswick and the surrounding country this morning and the jubilant people are celebrating the event. The last scores of the Brunswick epidemic are closing fast and the town will soon resume its business.

At Jesup, Ga., ice formed a quarter of an inch thick, and Surgeon Murray wired Surgeon General Wyman the following: "Good frost last night, quarter inch ice; recommend removal of yellow fever cases as soon as disinfection is complete, which will be to morrow, that trains be allowed to stop."

Still Carrying on the War

CAPETOWN, Nov. 16.—Mr. Cecil Rhodes, Premier Minister of Cape Colony and chairman of the British South Africa company, has sent a quantity of dress to the company's force at Bulawayo for the company's headquarters of Major Lobengula, who is carrying on a war against the whites in Matabeleland.

An Arkansas Bandit

BATESVILLE, Ark., Nov. 16.—A stranger armed with a Winchester entered the jewelry store of Alexander & Davidson last evening and ordered Davidson to hold up his hands and told Alexander to hand over the cash. The money drawer was emptied of $20 and the robber left. A posse is in pursuit.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Herald has the following relating to the trouble in the Bank of England:

Attention has been drawn to the fact that no world institution is more solid than the Bank of England. It was not publicly announced that Chief Cashier Mace of the Bank of England had resigned his position twenty years before, and that the directors had to pay all the losses.

It is apparent the Cashier Mace had made no return to the directors respecting his stewardship, and it is said that he had been allowed the Bank in his own name.

ONLY THE FIRST STEP.

The establishment of a Cripple Creek headquarters by the Chamber of Commerce is of the utmost importance both to the camp and to this city. It should be assured before to-morrow night, and we have no doubt it will be assured.

One especially good reason for taking ing this step at this time is that it can be used as a basis from which to go forward to greater things.

The relations between this city and the camp are vital and intimate, and every effort should be made to bind them still closer.

Other cities are reaching out for the advantages of a close connection with the camp, and unless this city moves, and moves promptly, a large portion of the trade which should come here, and which would come if the proper effort were made to get it and keep it, will go to Denver or Pueblo. Already a special fund has been raised in Denver to advertise the gold regions of the State, and Cripple Creek especially. It is to Denver's interest to foster the impression at this east that Denver is the headquarters for information, and the proper channel for investment. We cannot blame Denver for her enterprise; but if we want the world to know that Colorado Springs, and not Denver, is the place to write to or come to for information, we must make it so, even more than it is now. We must let the people elsewhere know that this is the nearest city to the great gold field, and that every item of information necessary to investment may be here obtained.

Still further, at no distant day, the project of a short line of rapid transit from this city to Cripple Creek will assume definite shape. Such a line would be of immense advantage to both places. It would enable many men who cannot do so now with comfort, to live here and have their families here, and at the same time do business in the camp. A line twenty-five miles long, or even thirty—and such a line could be located—would bring us within an hour and a half, or two hours at most, instead of five or five and a half, as at present.

Perhaps nothing can be done directly toward this project at the present time; but the establishment of closer relations with the camp by means of an official headquarters is the most effective step that can be taken at present toward the end in view.

Every business man in town, every professional man, and more especially every wage-earner, is directly interested in bringing more people and more capital to this city, and to Cripple Creek through this city; for that means more people, more houses, more goods to be sold, more work to be done.

Let everybody take hold and help, for this is going to help everybody.

WORSE AND WORSE.

If Mr. Cleveland has indeed issued instructions to Minister Willis and Admiral Irwin to destroy the Provisional government of Hawaii and set up the debauched Queen, he has declared war against a friendly government—a government which has been recognized not only by the United States, but by all other civilized governments having relations with it.

If Mr. Cleveland has thus declared war, on his own responsibility and without even consulting with the Congress of the United States, he has committed a high crime and misdemeanor against the Constitution which he has sworn to maintain.

The power to declare war is expressly vested by our Constitution in the Congress. The President has no power to do it, unless he usurps that power and defies the Constitution.

If Mr. Cleveland has done this, he ought to be impeached.

THE WINTER NIGHT COLLEGE.

The first regular session of the Winter Night College will be held this evening in the lecture room of the First Presbyterian Church. But although the pastor of that church is the President and mainspring of the college, it is not in any sense a denominational institution. The leaders of the several circles are from four or five churches, and the privileges of the course are open to everybody.

We feel no hesitation, therefore, in urging all who can find the time to join one of the circles in this college, and devote one evening of each week to study and discussion of some one of the topics that are to be treated of there. No educational qualification is required, and no one's ignorance will be exploited. Every one will have a chance to say what he thinks; and in some of the courses valuable information may be acquired.

To those who have a desire to do some reading for self-improvement, and that shall not be merely desultory, such an institution offers special advantages. It helps to crystalize thought, to direct one's effort along some particular line and to some definite object. It suggests continually subjects for research. It gives the agreeable sense of companionship and common interest in worthy intellectual effort.

To women who care, in view of their new political duties, to devote a little study to the formation and operation of the government under which we live, the circle in Civics offers a special opportunity. To householders and housekeepers, real estate men, and others, the course in Sanitary Science will be helpful. The two purely literary classes have already a large enrollment, and will doubtless grow. Current Topics is always a most interesting circle. The Journey Club will give a fine opportunity for European travel to those who have never seen the Old World, and will refresh the memory and reawaken the interest of those who have seen it. The class in Social Science will study some of the deepest moral problems of the day. Geology is particularly interesting in this region. In fact, each circle has its own special attractions, and the larger the circles, the more interesting and instructive they will be.

PROTECTION IN COLORADO.

Is sheep raising a Colorado industry? If so, will the importation of foreign wool, free of duty, injure Colorado's interests?

Do the people of Colorado use sugar? If so will a rise of 2c a pound tell on their pockets?

Can sugar beets be grown in Colorado? If so, will the destruction of the home sugar industry by taking off the bounty injure our State?

Do the people of Colorado use wire nails?

The duty on wire nails was quadrupled in 1883. In the ten years since the price of wire nails has fallen 70 per cent. Do the people want to pay three times as much for nails as they do now?

Do the people of Colorado use cotton goods?

Under Republican protection, the price of calico has gone down from 12½c to 5c a yard. Do the people want to pay twice as much for their cotton goods as they do now?

These are a few of the questions to be answered if Colorado people desire to know whether they are benefitted by Republican protection and reciprocity, and whether they would be injured by Democratic "revenue reform."

WHEN THE EARTH IS DEAD.

The Ultimate Extinction of All Life and How It Will Come About.

The probability that life will become extinct on earth in the remote future appears to be a fascinating theme of study with many speculative scientists. Recently a remarkable little volume was published in London. In that book its writer, T. Mellard Reade, drew a forcible picture of the condition of the earth when its atmosphere and life shall pass away and the bare rain of this world shall go circling through the heavens as barren as lifeless and as airless as the moon is today.

Now recently a writer has been endeavoring to estimate the time when life shall cease on earth. Solar physicists and astronomers are in tolerable agreement in fixing the period when the sun will begin to finally cool at from 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 years hence. But earthly vitality is likely to have a still more limited existence, and science, we are told by the writer in question, can even prognosticate the causes of its decay. When the spots that now flock the equatorial zone of the sun have become sufficiently large to cause serious interference of light and heat, higher life will become impossible.

There is also a cause within the earth which might anticipate this crisis. Gradually, but surely, the erosion of coast line by the sea and the flattening of mountains by torrents and glaciers are reducing dry land to the level of the ocean. When the leveling is complete, the earth will become one vast swamp, unsuitable for human life. Four or five million years is the period given to the earth by geologists wherein to reach this stage.

But these speculative theorists do not seem to take into consideration the important physical fact that nothing is wasted on earth. If rocks and mountains are eroded or depressed in one part, the detritus takes part in the work of construction at another, for the destructive and constructive elements of nature are always uniformly potent.

Matter destroyed merely undergoes conversion, and whatever force there may be in the supposition that the sun will part with its heat in the course of time there seems no good ground for the theory that the extinction of life may be anticipated by the conversion of dry land into a desolate swamp through any natural process of geologic evolution.—Chicago Times.

The Five Faithful Mares.

The origin of the best strain of Arabian blood has been related by some romancer. While Mohammed was fighting his way to greatness he was once compelled to lead his corps of 20,000 cavalry for three days without a drop of water. At last from a hilltop they descried the silver streak of a [illegible] Mohammed sounded his trumpet to blow the call to dismount and loose the horses. The poor brutes, starving for water, at once sprang into a mad gallop toward the longed for goal. No sooner loosened than came the alarm—false, as it happened—of a sudden ambush. "To horse" was blown and repeated by a hundred bugles. But the demand was too great. The parched throats were not to be refused. The stampede grew wilder and wilder as 20,000 steeds pushed desperately for the river banks.

Of all the frantic crowd but five mares responded to the call. To these duty was higher than suffering. They turned in their tracks, came bravely back, pleading in their eyes and anguish in their sunken flanks, and stood before the prophet. Love for their master and a sense of obedience had conquered their distress, but their bloodshot eyes told of a fearful torment the more pathetic for their dumbness. The danger was over. The faithful mares were at once released, but Mohammed selected these five for his own use, and they were the dams of one of the great races of the desert. From them have sprung the best of Arabian steeds. It can, however, scarcely be claimed that the average horse of the orient comes up to this ideal. He must have been bred from the 19,995.—Harper's Magazine.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

A SIGHTLY SPOT.

Within the Range of Vision of Vast Human Interests.

[Special Correspondence.]

ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 13.—A most sightly spot is Eagle rock, which rears its stony front on the eastern edge of the Orange mountain just west of this city. It cannot be said of the view from its summit that it is possessed of features of rugged natural grandeur, but the expanse of land and water [illegible] and a most beautiful panorama has rarely been unpolled by Dame Nature for the inspection of mortals. In human interest it is doubtful if this view is equaled the world over. From Eagle rock one may overlook the homes and places of business of a larger number of his fellow men than from any other natural point of observation.

At the mountain's foot and climbing up its sides are the city of Orange, with a population of 20,000; the towns of Montclair, with 5,000; South Orange, with 3,000; Bloomfield, with 3,000. The city of Newark, population 200,000, lies to the east of these, and farther to the south Elizabeth, with 40,000. Bayonne, with 20,000, is found east of Elizabeth, and a part of Jersey City, population 180,000, is also visible. Just east of Newark are Harrison, population 10,000, and Kearney, 4,000. Hoboken, where dwell 50,000, is shut out from sight by the palisades, but may be included because the eye reaches beyond, and a dozen smaller New Jersey places, aggregating 8,000, are also in full view.

Beyond the Hudson lies the city of New York, with her 1,800,000 to 2,000,000 inhabitants, plainly visible on a clear day, and still beyond New York the heights of Brooklyn, the City of Churches, where live 806,000 more, are to be seen. The total so far is large enough, but this is not all, for on some of these fine autumn days the tall tower at Coney Island comes into view, so that it is only fair to include the 50,000 or more who live between Brooklyn and the Island and 5,000 who dwell permanently on that bank of sand. The northern portion of Staten Island, bearing a population of at least 25,000, may also be seen when the haze is entirely cleared away, and this brings the grand total up to 2,522,000.

To add to the interest of the scene white sails and the smoky trails of steam craft are visible on the bays of Newark and New York, and the hurrying trains of a network of railroads that intersect the landscape like the threads of a design of a carpet pass constantly across the field. Where else have nature and humanity combined to make a picture of such varied life and motion and absorbing interest?

I do not know that any story of romance is told of Eagle rock, but only half a mile to the west, on the mountain's flat top, is the spot where, ten or a dozen years ago, was found one morning the corpse of Phoebe Paulin. The life blood had flowed from the poor girl's body through a small wound made by one knife thrust in the neck, so skillfully placed as to reach the carotid artery. She was not more than 18 years old, and she seems to have been a general favorite from the manner in which the neighbors still speak of her.

"The mountain was afire with excitement," said a farmer of the vicinity in describing the finding of the body and the search for the murderer, "and detectives from Newark and New York were on the case for months. But nothing came of the investigation, although there were two or three arrests."

The great world has long ago forgotten all about the Phoebe Paulin mystery, although at the time it excited almost, if not quite, as much interest as the Rahway mystery of later years. On the spot where Phoebe's body was found the Salvation Army built a speaker's stand and some rough board benches early last spring, and there they held meetings all the summer through.

A quarter of a mile farther west on the mountain top is a tiny lake, and from its shore one may look across the narrow valley still farther west to the second mountain, near the summit of which gleams a whitewashed stone that marks the place where Washington once camped during the war of independence.

Paper From Sunflowers.

[Special Correspondence.]

ABILENE, Kan., Nov. 14.—Kansas has found a way to utilize another of its riches. The great fields of sunflowers that through the summer are seas of gold, and give the commonwealth its familiar title, "The Sunflower State," are to be put to a practical rather than an æsthetic use. The gigantic weeds are the bane of the farmer, as they take possession of every uncultivated nook, and wave their yellow medallions from the tops of 8 and 10 foot stalks for six months of the year. Sometimes the chief expense in preparing the fields for spring grain is to rid them of the old sunflower stalks. It has often been said that if the weed could be used for any purpose whatever Kansas would be wealthy.

The prediction seems about to come true. The president of a paper mill at Salina had [illegible] to make paper. He looked upon the acres of sunflowers that grace the bottom lands of the Smoky Hill river and went to experimenting. With a flatiron and hammer he pounded up the stalks and decided that the pulp would do. He arranged for a trial of the weed in lieu of straw at his mill, and the result surprised not only the spectators gathered at the trial, but himself as well. The fiber was better than that of straw paper. The toughness enables a larger amount of paper to be produced from a given amount of pulp. The gummy substance that destroys so much straw paper at the press rolls is absent, and the sheets run through the driers and finishing calenders without sticking or tearing. The entire stock of the sunflower is used, and the small cost of the raw material, being merely that of gathering, promises to make the new manufacture profitable. The mill is turning out the unique product steadily, and others will soon take it up.

Thus far only express and hardware papers are being manufactured regularly, though sufficient paper of a better quality was made to print The Daily Republican of Salina on the day of the trial, Oct. 27.

Kansas seems to be only just learning the extent of its resources. It has a corner on sunflowers and can utilize them.

A Cantonment.

The cantonment at an Indian town means the place where the English live. The native town is usually inclosed by high walls and accessible only by a few gates. It is brimful of people, who crowd its bazaars or shop streets. Quite outside the town and a mile or two away is the cantonment, [illegible] where each house stands in its own inclosure, or compound, and where the regiments, British or native, are quartered in "lines" or rows of huts.

The cantonment usually has within well kept roads, with a grassy margin and avenues of fine trees, giving it the appearance of a great park. The English visitor, if he stays with friends, might be a week without seeing the native town at all, unless his curiosity prompted an excursion in search of it. There is always in the cantonment a club, with a ladies' wing—unless the ladies have a gymkhana or club of their own—and besides the various parade grounds, a polo ground or tennis court, so that a visitor lent only on amusement has plenty of resources.—Nineteenth Century.

AROUND THE WORLD AND MET.

A Strange Coming Together of Father and Daughter From Opposite Directions.

By a strange current of events Mrs. Evan Johns, who had parted from her father in Wales in her babyhood, met him again in this city after each had come half way around the globe, and the instinctive recognition and embrace made the couple an object of curiosity to passersby.

Eighteen or twenty years ago David Davies, practical miner, in the full vigor of manhood, left his family in Newbridge, Wales, to seek a fortune in Japan. When he made goodby to his family, his youngest child, a little girl, was a baby. He drifted from one part of Japan to another, prospecting the country and frequently making fair strikes. At intervals he heard from home and learned that his baby had grown up and was married to a young miner named Evan Johns. To the young couple children were born, and about three years ago the family crossed the sea and settled in Butte, Mon. They knew that Davies had left Japan in 1887 for Washington, but where to find him they had no idea.

A short time ago Johns decided to move from Butte to Black Diamond, and was making arrangements to move his family in this city. Chance had it that he met Thomas H. Davies, a native of Wales, at the Phoenix hotel on Washington street and learned from him that David Davies, now an old man, came to Seattle frequently. Johns immediately let his wife know that her father might possibly be in Seattle when she arrived and told her to see Thomas H. Davies, who is no blood relation, and learn about her father.

Last Wednesday night Mrs. Johns got off the Northern Pacific train with four children—two boys and two girls—and went to the Phoenix hotel. The next morning she learned that her father had not been at the hotel, but might be in the city. She had not seen him since she was a baby, and it would be a strange thing if she could pick him out of a crowd, but her friends told her to look for a man who wore his hat over one eye. She followed their instructions, and when not half a block from South Third street met a man whom she thought to be her father. Without hesitation she called his name. He replied. They stood for a moment looking at one another, then, as if the truth dawned on both, kissed, embraced and began to cry.

Mrs. Johns' children watched the proceeding for a moment in wonder, and as if realizing that something out of the ordinary was transpiring began to shed tears also. A few pedestrians looked over their shoulders at the weeping group and then passed on, wondering what had happened to cause such an outburst. Father and daughter and the children returned to the Phoenix hotel to tell their mutual friend, Thomas H. Davies, all about the meeting. There was so much heartfelt joy in the way they told the story that Davies shed a few tears himself in sympathy. It was a happy day for all parties interested, and the father never lost sight of his daughter until she took the train with her children and baggage for Black Diamond.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Absurd!

MARK TWAIN.

The most characteristic story written by America's greatest humorist. The scene of Mark Twain's stories is laid in the Mississippi valley, and the story now in hand is a romance of the Mississippi River forty years ago. The hero is a boy who is much of a humorist himself, and who has a sweetheart who is a character worthy of the author of "Pudd'nhead Wilson." The story will be illustrated by Thousands Morelli, who has spent a month on the Mississippi River in order to get the atmosphere and scenery right. Mr. Twain's humorous stories are well drawn, and illustrations are interesting.

Bargain Hunting Women.

"This morning," said Bookseller ... ...a woman comes up to me ... ...picking up one of these pamphlets that ... ...gone now.

"'What's this marked down from?'

"'Marked down from nothing, madam,' says I, and she threw it down as if it burned her. 'Three or four did the same thing. So, says I to myself, 'Me lady, you're here to sell books, not to be honest,' so when the next one comes along and asks the same old question I was ready for her.

"'Ninety-eight cents, ma'am,' says I, 'and marked down from $1.98, less than half price.'

"Six women made a jump for them, and they almost pulled them to pieces. There was eight dozen copies on the table. Where are they now, ha? Gone, every last one. Gone like hot cakes. I'm a student, I am; a student of human nature. Go out in the street and get a cartload of cobblestones, rub 'em up with a nice, pin 'em on a table, call 'em paperweights, 19 cents, marked down from 49 cents. What'll be the consequence? You'll see the women stampeding home with them wrapped up in pink paper.

"'You make me tired,' said the new man.

"'How much do you get?' asked the other, leaning over.

"'Fourteen dollars. What's that got to do with it?'

"'Well, I get $16. You let the boss know a good man when he sees him.'—New York Herald.

Waterloo.

I would say to those about to visit Waterloo don't, but if you will, then go by rail and omnibus, take a field glass and a ... study the country from the top of it. Employ no guide and resist all temptation to purchase Waterloo relics made last year, or photographs, which can be obtained both better and cheaper in Brussels.

The constant flow of English visitors to the field gives to ... especially the Belgians, an idea that Waterloo was the only really big battle in which British troops ever fought and beat the French, and in histories used by Belgian school children they are taught to believe that the victory was mainly owing to the prodigies of valor shown by the Belgian troops.

In Germany the victory is claimed for the Prussians, and no two accounts of the fight agree even as to the hour when the first shot was fired. The Germans speak of the fight as the battle of St. Lambert, the French call it Mont St. Jean, and why we call it the battle of Waterloo is one of those problems which, I fear, will never be solved.—Notes and Queries.

Carried the Ball Twenty-nine Years.

Andy Costen, a citizen of Wise county, Tex., was showing a middle ball at Decatur recently that he had taken out of his head. Mr. Costen was wounded in 1864 on a retreat from Dalton to Atlanta, Ga., under the command of Joseph E. Johnston, Frank Cheatham's division, in the Fifteenth Tennessee regiment. The ball entered just above the right eye and lodged in his right jaw and since the wound healed he has never felt him until recently when a physician examined it, which resulted in the physician's extracting it from the place where it had been 29 years. The ball weighs 497 grains and has its original shape.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A BOWERY INCIDENT.

The Unhappy Outcome of a Gothamite's Effort to Be a Humorist.

It happened on the Bowery, because that is the place to call the strangest things happen. There was a crowd passed the window of a furnishing store, the center of which was a dummy, which had been a source of amusement to the crowd for many days, and, as usual, the crowd was composed of men, and, as usual, they had chipped up the dummy's clothing, and they spoke and acted as the crowd always does when they stood in front of the window. One of the young men in the crowd, behind the other, while the crowd was in full swing, had a bright idea, and, evidently very much pleased at the idea, he put it into effect on the dummy.

The crowd of the young men was a large one, and, as usual, it was composed of men who had lived in the Bowery all their lives, and who had seen all the sights that the Bowery could show them, and, as usual, they were a hard looking lot, and, as usual, they were very much pleased at the idea of the young man.

He was one of the young men who had lived in the Bowery all his life, and who had seen all the sights that the Bowery could show him, and, as usual, he was a hard looking young man, and, as usual, he was very much pleased at the idea of the young man.

"Say, Bill," said the young man to the other, "I'll bet you can't do that."

"Bet I can," said the other young man, and he was very much pleased at the idea of the young man.

A cold wave is reported on the way, and evidently many people believe it, for over forty pairs of skates have been left at Frank Bumstead's machine shop on Cascade avenue to be sharpened.

The Famous Shoe store will have an extraordinary sale to day and to-morrow. They announce that it will be the greatest sacrifice they have ever made. We call attention to their announcement elsewhere.

The Ladies' Foreign and Home Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, will give a social at the parsonage, No. 221 East Cucharas street, this evening. The usual pleasant time is promised to all who attend.

The Columbian Club is the name of a new dancing club that has been organized in the city, and numbers fifty-five members. The first dance of the club is to be given Nov. 23 and will be followed by dances on Dec. 28 and Jan. 27.

At the meeting of the Colorado College Scientific society, to be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock, President Slocum will read a paper on "The Ethical Problem of the Public School System." The public is invited to attend the meeting.

Those who heard Mr. Williamson when he spoke to young men before will be glad of the chance to hear him again. The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock.

A meeting of the directors of the Midland Terminal railroad was held yesterday afternoon in this city. The board, by a unanimous vote, decided to extend the road to Florence. The preliminary survey and the right of way are to be secured immediately. The idea of the company in this is to cross the entire camp of Cripple Creek and give two outlets for the road.

C. E. Evans & Co. have added a shirt department to the business and have engaged A. L. Bittings, a first class shirt maker, to take charge of that line. Hereafter there will be no necessity for sending out of the city for shirts but patrons will find Mr. Evans well prepared for that kind of work, and he will always guarantee satisfaction.

MINES AND STOCKS.

A fraction of the Golden Chariot claim which adjoins the Carbonate Queen was sold under a bond and lease yesterday by J. K. Fleat and others to G. H. Patterson, an eastern man. Russell Prentice of this city negotiated the sale. The price was $5,000.

Two adverse suits were filed in the District Court yesterday as follows: John Patterson et al. vs. C. H. Barnes et al., the Big Chief adversing the Kismet; The Jeff. Davis Mining Co. vs. F. H. Gruber et al., the Accident and the Grotto adversing the Emma W.

Articles of incorporation of the Raymond Gold Mining company were filed yesterday. The capital stock is $700,000, and Geo. R. Raymond, Everett A. Fay, Albert F. Force, E. F. Lamb and A. B. Coulson are named as the directors. The company will have its offices in Denver, but will operate in this county.

The stock market was rather quiet yesterday. Mollie Gibson advanced in price to $1.95 on the strength of the advance in the price of silver bullion. There is very little of the stock on the market at this price. Calumet closed last night at 9½c. The volume of trading in this stock was not large. Work closed at 4c bid and 4½c asked. The Denver papers reported a slump in the price at that point to 3½c on the report of an attachment against the property. It was claimed that a block of 20,000 shares was offered at that price. Alamo was quite strong at 1½c, and Anaconda held firm at 26c.

The Gazette was a bit premature in announcing the sale of the Carbonate Queen of the Ophir company, as the papers were not signed until yesterday afternoon. Eben Smith is the purchaser, under a bond and lease and pays $75,000. The first payment is to be made on January 1, 1894, with payments every three months thereafter, the last payment January 1, 1896. The sale was negotiated by Russell Prentice of this city. It is stated that it is the intention of the lessee to put a large force of men at work at once and to rapidly develop the property. The claim is already developed by a tunnel 300 feet long and a shaft about 60 feet deep.

The first number of the new Cripple Creek newspaper, The Morning Journal, came to hand yesterday. It is an eight page paper, and if it can keep up the gait at which it starts, will be a valuable addition to the press of the State. In politics it is non-committal.

Mr. Peter Eales, late Populist candidate for sheriff, was elected city marshal of Cripple Creek by the city council of that place yesterday.
